

FEATURE

Eat This Now: Atlanta's 30 Essential Dishes

BY CHRISTOPHER HASSIOTIS | JANUARY 23, 2017

Credit: Mia Yakei, Porch Light, Andrew Thomas Lee/Bread & Butterfly, Jinya Ramen Bar

Atlanta's dining scene is constantly evolving, with new restaurants popping up weekly. An embarrassment of riches is certainly a great problem to have, but diving into the vast array of choices can be overwhelming. If you want to know what the city's about right now, these are the dishes — mostly new, with some classics — that you've got to get out and try.

Credit: Melissa Libby PR

Steak frites at The Federal

This new Midtown spot from chefs Shaun Doty and Lance Gummere resurrects some of that simple bistro appeal that made the restaurant Shaun's such a charmer in the previous decade. The steak frites is a classic, available as à la carte or as part of a prix fixe happy-hour special at the bar. Served with maître d'hôtel butter and a salad of sunflower sprouts, it's a straightforward but well-executed dish that represents a great return to form for the duo.

1050 Crescent Ave. NE; 404-343-3857

<https://www.zagat.com/b/atlanta/atlanta-30-essential-dishes>

MELISSA LIBBY & ASSOCIATES